Las Colinas Golf & Country Club has been named as Spain's Leading Villa Resort at the World Travel Awards.

Voted for by the public and announced at a glittering ceremony in Sardinia, the awards support, promote and develop the global travel and tourism industry by identifying and rewarding excellence.

The 'Leading Villa Resort' category rewards those resorts that not only offer world-class facilities but that also provide additional attractions and services, all seamlessly integrated with cutting edge designed property.

Silvia Llanes, residential and quality director at Gmp, the Spanish real estate group that own Las Colinas, commented; "We are so happy to have won such a prestigious award. We have long been admirers of the World Travel Awards and to win in such a tough category is very pleasing indeed.

"To say Las Colinas Golf & Country Club is Spain's number one villa resort is something we are very proud of.

"I must thank our owners and all of the Las Colinas staff who work tirelessly to ensure a world apart experience for our guests."

The Spanish resort, located south of Alicante in 330 hectares of Mediterranean woodland, has become a leader in attracting international leisure visitors and second-home owners to the region since its opening in 2010.
